The Creation and Early Years of the Newlyn School – lecture by Alan Read

In the final decades of the nineteenth century a colony of artists formed in the Cornish fishing port of Newlyn. This lecture looks at some of the early pioneers of the 'school', in particular Walter Langley, who was one of the first to settle there and Stanhope Forbes, who is often described as the 'father' of Newlyn.

Spring Term Art Classes

Spring term started this week with 90 students taking eight classes, including the new pastels class.

I hope everyone enjoys their classes and we are all looking forward to seeing the artwork.

Those of you who use easels in the classes will discover we have bought many new ones and repaired several of the existing ones. You should be able to enjoy sliding your easels painlessly in all directions!

Kathy Barker, one of our professional tutors, was away before Christmas in the Caribbean painting Roman murals at a new villa. The murals are taking longer than the team anticipated and Kathy has been asked to stay on for a few weeks. I am delighted that Daisy Drummond has agreed to continue to take Kathy's classes for the first half of term.

We have a new team of volunteers organising the spring art class exhibition this year. This will take place in the Reading Room in April.

All students who took an art class in the preceding twelve months will be invited to enter one of their art works; these do not need to be framed and none are for sale.

The team will provide each class with more details as the term progresses and the tutors will help students chose an artwork to exhibit. In the meantime start thinking about your favourite.
